I would like to see the FDA BAN the practice of adding antibiotics to animal feed.

This is in support of the Center for Science in Public Interest's petition requesting the same action. My concern is the same as theirs: by continuously exposing bacteria to useful antibiotics, resistant strains evolve to the extent that antibiotics are rendered ineffective.

I've fought a bout with a bacterial infection which seemed impossible to defeat with antibiotics "that should have worked," but survived, according to my doctor, due to my own defenses and luck.

Thank You!
